Out of Bear and Monkey Both. He was a short, swarthy Italian, and he was lame. He had in his hand a postal card, and asked the reporter to write a note for him to a gentleman in Maryland. His English was much broken, and it took the reporter some time to make out exactly what he wanted said. After worrying at it patiently the following communication was evolved, which the Italian pronounced

*My Dran Sin: The man to whom I rented my bear at $5 a week left Annapolis for this city and did not pay me. I came here and found the man, but instead of his here and found the man, but lastead of his giving me any money he charged me $51 for the animal's keep. I was out of money, but having my monkey with me I pawned him for $1.60. All that is gone, and I spent my last cent for this postal card. Now, sir, will you please give me a job on your places and I will walk down there. You know I work hard."

A Colored Woman's Suicide. A colored woman named Susan Wadds f 512 Twenty-first street died at So'clock this morning from the effects of a dose of carbolic acid that she took last Tuesday with suicidal effect. Dr. Norton was called in, but could not save her life. She died in terrible agony, and from the nature of the drug she must have suffered excruciating pain from the moment she swallowed it. Sulcide among colored people is a very rare occurrence. There were two or three cases last year in the District, which never occurred before. The coroner was notified.

Mr. Ballantyne's 10 Per Cent. n explanation from the District Commisioners in regard to the claim of William Bal lantyne & Son for school supplies, on which an advance of 10 per cent. was allowed. The claim amounted to $500, and the explanation furnished is that the appropriation had been exhausted and the supplies were needed, and Mr. Ballantyne furnished them at an advance of 10 per cent. with the understanding that he would have to rely on Congress making an appropriation to pay his bill.

THE ART OF TATTOOING.

What Was Learned by a Visit to a New York "Studio."

A reporter of the New York Herald, who recently found his way into the "studio" of a professor of the art of tattooing in South street in that city, says that half a dozen Spaniards were lounging about the place, while one of the "professors" was busily at work on the bare shoulder of a seventh, who serencly smoked, unmindful of the pain, while the operator pricked into pain, while the operator pricked into his flesh what was designed to be a beautiful angel, with outstretched wings. Several of the loungers mentioned had their arms bare, and these were decorated with pictures of goddesses, American and Spanish flags, angels, devils and even snakes.

The man in the operator's chair, however, was a veritable picture gallery in himself. He was bare to the waist, and there was not a square inch waist, and there was not a square inch of his back that was not decorated. The main scene was a representation of the crucifixion. Angels, supposed to be unseen by those below, hovered about the cross. The angel on the Spaniard's shoulder was the last one of the work. The descent from the cross was pictured on the man's broad chest, and on his arms were scenes representing different periods in the Saviour's life from the cradle to man

"The subject's legs are covered with scenes of a similar character," said the Professor, as he paused to survey his work. "This man is going back to Spain to exhibit himself. He will attend the Spanish bull fights and other places of amusement. That will do for to day." he added to the man in Spanish. The victim grinned, showing an even set of white grinders, and throwing away his case, proceeded to does ing away his cigar, proceeded to dress.

"The business of tattooing has been much written about," the "professor" continued, after washing the ink from his hands, "but of its present extent people are not aware. We have all the work we can do, and the number of reach washing the state of th the work we can do, and the number of people we decorate in a year's time is astonishing. The great majority of our patrons are, of course, sailors, but many others come, some out of curiosity, and others because they want something to remind them of past events. Old soldiers often come and have a wreath or some decoration put around bullet wounds. One man wanted the epitaph engraved on his wife's tomb stone reproduced on his own chest." "Do many women come? Well, not so many women as men, but those who do are from the middle ranks. One woman wanted a four-leafed clover worked on her arm, another desired a lover's knot tied with ribbons, and one emotional miss wanted a scroll with her lover's name. My part ner there has tattooed two women all over for exhibition. Their story is the museums is that it was done by savages.

"Can you remove the marks?"

"Yes, though it is generally supposed to be impossible. The flesh, however, is never the clear, white color it was before being tattooed." savages.
